“Capitalizing on Building Resilience”

Amidst aging infrastructure, limited resources, social unrest, and natural disasters, it is easy for one to be pessimistic about where our area and the United States as a whole (and even the world) are headed. Nevertheless, there are those out there that do not see these converging needs as mutually exclusive and unending. Resilience planning leverages solutions for one issue into solving others, and avoids the huge opportunity cost of failing to invest in resilience. Come learn about how risk is being leveraged into opportunity around the world, the United States, and in the Chicago area, as well as how the many benefits of such actions can be quantified and substantiated.
